

Maryland Network Against Domestic Violence

The Maryland Network Against Domestic Violence (MNADV) believes that:

Domestic violence is a serious public safety issue and that everyone, of all immigration statuses, has a right to protection.

Immigrant victims should feel safe when calling the police that they will be protected from abuse without suffering any immigration consequences.

The criminal justice system should establish and follow policies and procedures at every stage of the process that are conducive to victim safety and abuser accountability.